

Beginning in Steyning you make your way to the banks of the River Adur. The land abounds with wild grasses and flowers and during the summer there are many butterflies, damselflies and dragonflies. The river attracts a wide variety of birds including herons, swans, ducks, kingfishers and cormorants.

The River once carried trade with the French Ports. Caen stone was transported direct to Steyning and Beeding churches and other buildings in the area. It was also extensively used by the cement works at Beeding. Today it is a haven of peace and delight to the naturalist.

This circular walk, crosses the 32 mile long Downs link (a bridleway which links the South Downs Way to the North Downs Way near Guildford) and then takes you via local farms into the countryside. There are great views of local landmarks including Truleigh Hill, Chanctonbury Ring and Lancing College.

There are ample opportunities on the walk for picnicking, when dry on the river bank, and on well positioned benches. The walk is suitable for exercising dogs, providing they remain under control and on the lead near farms and animals.

On returning to Steyning don't miss the opportunity to visit the Church of St Andrew with its magnificent Norman nave.

Historic Steyning, nestling against the inspiring landscape of the South Downs, is well known as one of the most picturesque towns in Sussex.

The town of Saint Cuthman (c750AD), Steyning is rich in history, with scores of timber-framed buildings in and around the ancient High Street, and its excellent museum. It was once a port on the then navigable estuary of the River Adur and was prized by the Normans; their legacy today includes the magnificent parish church and the ruins of the castle in nearby Bramber.

Steyning offers the visitor a fantastic selection of interesting shops (including the award winning Cobblestone Walk), a monthly farmers market and ample free parking. There are also restaurants, pubs and tea rooms offering delicious food and drink, plus a wide selection of great accommodation for the weary traveller.

Rightfully known as a great destination for walkers, Steyning provides easy access to beautiful countryside, the South Downs Way and to other long distance paths. There are also excellent local routes to the mysterious Chanctonbury Ring, the Iron Age hill fort at Cissbury Ring, and delightfully gentle walks through the Adur Valley.

Come and experience Steyning for yourself; the warmest welcome awaits you.

Start

From the car park cross a wooden bridge over a small stream alongside a children's play area and turn right up to a crossing path. Turn left up to a road. Cross into Holland Road. At the end, cross a road and go along a path between houses, which crosses the bypass on a high footbridge. Turn right and immediately left into a path. Stay on this path until a crossing road, ignoring a side road and path. Cross into Castle Way, stay on the left side, crossing a side road and, at the end, cross a road into another path between houses.

Go down to a crossing path and turn left, shortly reaching a stile into open fields. Stay on a high path alongside a stream until a stile and turn right over the stream towards a metal bridge over the River Adur. Turn left at the bridge and walk along the high bank keeping the river on your right.

The walk is about 6.5 miles, taking around 3 hours. It is a relatively level walk, with some stiles. Some paths can be overgrown in the summer, so sturdy footwear is recommended all year round. Free car parking is available at Fletchers Croft in Steyning, and bus stops are nearby. Refreshments and public toilets are available in Steyning, but none on route.

Turn left and follow the minor road, ignoring side paths and tracks. At a junction, there is a bench, with lovely views of Truleigh Hill, and in the distance, Devil's Dyke and the chapel at Lancing College.

Turn right and here the surface of the road becomes a track. Shortly you join the Downs Link (straight on, not left). Follow this snaking track. At Greenfields Farm entrance, the track becomes a road again and you Pass through a gate/stile and, still keeping the river on your right, join a path coming in from the left before another gate/stile. A pylon to the left close to the river is used as a roost by cormorants later in the year. Keep following the river, keeping it on the right.

The path reaches two gates and a stile; continue on keeping to the river side, the path is now grass. At low tides, look right at the first hard left hand bend and the remains of an old quay can be seen. A trackway ran from here to a quarry at Small Dole.

After a few bends, you reach an old railway bridge, which crosses the river. This is the Downs Link which starts a few miles away at Bramber and goes to St Martha's near Guildford in Surrey mostly using old railway tracks.

Cross a stile up onto the old railway track bed. There is a bench here with great views north. The row of white houses north eastwards is the Neptown area of Henfield. After crossing via a gate, continue along the river bank.

Pass through two gate/stiles close together and then through two more before reaching a marshy area on the left, where grey heron and white egrets can be seen.

At the fifth gate is Northover Pump. Turn left away from the river and follow the track, pass through a field gate (after passing a high hedge Chanctonbury Ring is clearly visible on the far horizon). Pass some houses and farm buildings on the left. At a junction, turn left through a field gate into a farmyard where there are free range chickens waiting to greet you.

Bear right through gate/stile and turn left, and walk along the edge of a field, to cross another stile, then walk around to the right following the field boundaries and the footpath signs. In the fields, there are brown and small blue butterflies.

track becomes a road again and you soon cross an old railway bridge. Stay on this minor road passing a water treatment works and Kings Barn Farm.

At the end, turn right. Continue straight on, leaving the Downs Link as it turns left between Kings Barn End. Stay on this road as it crosses the bypass on a high bridge and follow it down to the right before it turns left towards the church. The car park is on the left opposite the church.
