A very few words on a very fine Fair

Bigger, better and bouncier (despite the lack of Gladiators) than ever, is the word. And my oh my, did it live up to expectations and way beyond. It feels cruel not to mention by name the many folks who gave it their all and contributed to such a success, but we have fallen foul before by missing out key names, and this year there is no space anyway because we unapologetically do the whole thing in pictures. So let us jointly and severally give thanks to the army of dedicated planners, movers, shakers, helpers and masterminders, not forgetting those whose field it is, who judged the dog show, who organised and administrated all the stalls, who slaked our thirst and eased our hunger, who hammered, nailed, electrick'd, mantled and dismantled, who took care of the rubbish, who took all these fab pix... and who, last but by very much no means least, donated the most extraordinary and electrifying musical tour de force. Said individual's Proms performance can be seen on BBC4 on 9 Sep.

Wonder of Fulking Photography Competition

Such is the overwhelming abundance of Fair pictures that it has been unanimously decided by the Pigeon Post Editorial Advisory Board that we will keep the winners of the competition, which were made into card sets to sell at the fair by the estimable Ade Caroen of this parish, until the September issue. Suffice it to say that the judges, after a few bouts of friendly fisticuffs, were pretty much unanimous about the winners. The skill and judgement of our photographic Folkingites will be suitably applauded.
